Rhododendrons for ~~Lining~~ Out PRICE LIST FOR 1950-1951

Read the Following Information:

It is very important to know how Rhododendrons have been propagated and grown. Our method is as follows: When cuttings are rooted in sand, we transplant them in the mixture containing Beaver Dam soil, in order to assure a strong root system development, where all natural elements would be within a root structure. Consequently plants will grow vigorous and healthy.

Our Advantage:

- (1) Horticultural Knowledge: NICK RADOVICH is a graduate from Oregon State College; has been experimenting with these plants for 20 years.
- (2) We have nine acres of Beaver Dam or loam soil along Johnson Creek, 11 miles from city center and 2 miles from city limits in the south-east district.
- (3) We have succeeded in producing the best and healthiest plants, so that everybody has been satisfied.
- (4) Information: We follow a knowledge (horticultural science) and experience (our labor), so that we are able to extend better information about planting and taking care of Rhododendrons.
